A Message from the Governor,

The O'Malley administration takes great pride in supporting Maryland's technology industries. That is why I am pleased to provide the Maryland Modeling and Simulation Directory. This handy directory is designed to inform you of the many resources available in our state's modeling, simulation and interactive technology industries.

Maryland's business community has outstanding technology assets. The state is home to more than 50 federal laboratories and great academic institutions, such as the University System of Maryland and Johns Hopkins University. Maryland's rapidly growing modeling and simulation industry is further complemented by Baltimore County's East Coast gaming hub. Our outstanding business climate is drawing national attention; Entrepreneur Magazine recently ranked the Baltimore-Washington Corridor sixth on its list of "Hot Cities for Entrepreneurs."

The O'Malley-Brown administration is committed to helping technology industries develop and build vibrant commercial enterprises. In the last decade, the state has invested nearly $450 million in infrastructure to support our important technology-based industries. We applaud the leadership of Maryland's technology companies and scientists and remain committed to their continued success.
I also encourage you to visit our state. Only then will you know why Maryland is such a great place to live, work, and raise a family.
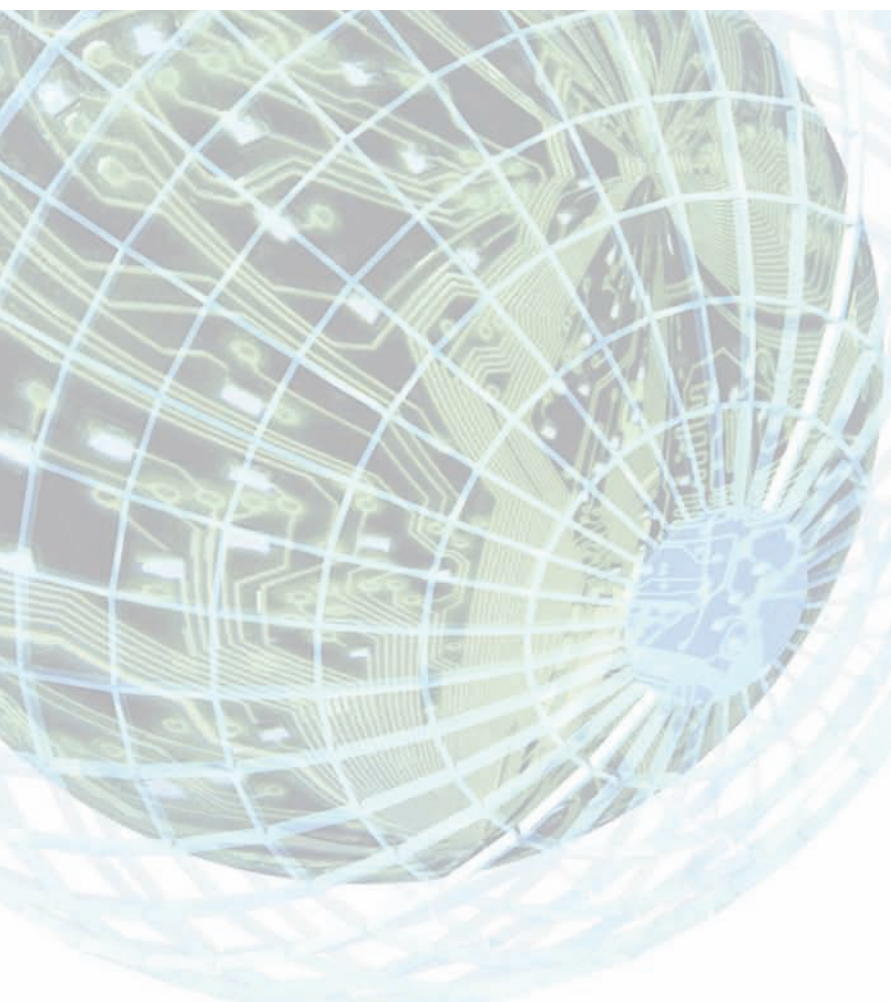

WHY MARYLAND?

East Coast Hub for Gaming: Maryland has one of the largest clusters of Modeling and Simulation (Mod-Sim) companies and facilities on the East Coast which provides great opportunities for growth and talent.

Core to the rapidly growing Medical Modeling and Simulation (MM&S) and Serious Gaming segments: Maryland is the largest regional cluster of MM&S and Serious Gaming companies as well the home for The Games for Health conferences.

Access to market and technology: Maryland offers a concentration of Mod-Sim and MM&S companies and a proximity to over 50 federal agencies and associated research facilities that have Modeling and Simulation technology as their specific focus.

Access to a knowledge workforce and research: Maryland provides immediate access to top universities producing the knowledge workforce of today and tomorrow as well as cutting edge research.

Technology transfer opportunities: A wealth of untapped technology transfer opportunities exist for cutting edge companies involved in Mod-Sim, 2D and 3D animation, Digital Production, Digital Design, Interactive Technology, MM&S, and emerging applications.

A cluster of affinity organizations to promote the Mod–Sim market place: This includes the Maryland Modeling and Simulation Analysis Council (MMSAC), Games for Health Initiative, and the Advanced Initiative in Medical Simulation.
